For 11 years the Hearts of Music Fund has delighted audiences attending its annual Trombone Christmas concert held each year on the Sunday evening before Christmas. As the chief fundraising event for the Hearts of Music Fund, this evening typically brings together 35 - 50 of the best studio players and freelance trombonists in Los Angeles as well as members of the Los Angeles Philharmonic; supplemented with select students and visiting trombonists who clamor to join the group.

It's not just the joy of making music together that unites these musicians, nor is it merely the opportunity to play Bill Reichenbach's arrangements under his direction. Rather, it's a deep and abiding commitment that honors Bill's vision to make life just a little easier for fellow musicians through the Hearts of Music Fund.

When musicians and their families face extraordinary health care expenses, the tragedies of illness or death, or the aftermath of accidents and incidents of nature; the Hearts of Music Fund is there to help - providing funds to recover and to re-establish the normalcy of daily life. The Hearts of Music Fund provides financial assistance for situations in which other funding support is limited or unavailable, bringing holistic healing and hope to those who embody the artistic and cultural life of Los Angeles.

The board and volunteers of the Hearts of Music Fund extend warm wishes for a joyful holiday season to our audience. We hope you enjoy the music and thank you for your generous support.

Happy Holidays!
